

My dad died in 2011. These past few weeks, I've been reflecting on a picture of him and my uncle (a former Minneapolis officer), taken with me in dad's driveway. I've been reliving that day in 2005 with fond memories. What thoughts come to your mind of life-lessons you've learned from your dad? In what ways is that shaping the investments you are making in the lives of your children and the countless other lives God has placed on your path? How is your relationship with God impacting them? The Scriptures remind us, every generation is to proclaim to the next, the wonders of His mighty acts. So, how are we doing? Remember, fathers who know the Lord make Him known.

Know the Lord

Make Him known

Invest in those you may never know

Personal Applications and Conversations

1. What have you been thinking about your dad on the run up to this Father's Day?
2. What pictures best capture your recent thoughts about your father?
3. How do you know that your dad really knows the Lord?
4. Hey dads, what do you think your kids might say about the reality of your relationship to the Lord?
5. Describe some of the primary lessons you learned from your dad about his relationship to the Lord.
6. Fathers, what are you endeavoring to do to invest in future generations deep knowledge of the Lord

Fathers who know the Lord make Him Known
